To the Parties:

I wanted to report to the parties that we have discovered a scrivener’s error in page numbering with Order No. 2018-804. If you will check your copies of this Order, you will see that there is no page five. What happened was that there was a section break at the end of page four. Unbeknownst to us, the page after page four ended up being numbered as page six, with the automatic numbering system. No material is missing from the copies of your Order. The only problem is that there is no page numbered five. There is only a jump in numbering between page four and page six! (I thought I had heard everything...) Anyway, the point in my writing is to say that we are going to renumber the pages in the Order so that there will be a page five. We are going to serve all parties with copies of the Order with renumbered pages. As I said before, your first copy was not missing any material, only a page numbered five. I thank you for your understanding and proffer my apology, as we correct a problem with an automated system gone slightly astray.

Regards,

David Butler
